Excerpt: . . . but in hardly any instance has there been a response accompanied by the smallest sample, which is the first necessity to the introduction of new varieties of goods, or a change in patterns or make in the old. Catalogues, of which we receive an abundance, are hardly sufficient to indicate shapes, colors and quality. Your first inquiry does not appear to contain any proposal of service that the head of a mission could not give or a consul frankly accept. It might, doubtless, in some respects, be modified by circumstances, where both officers were new to their posts, or the conditions affecting trade were different in one place from those in another. Official regulation and supervision, if they led to improvement, need not, within proper limits, cause friction; and a Minister, whose position gives him access to the views and susceptibilities of the highest authorities, would be able, if necessary, to suggest modifications in consular reports that might be judicious. The Persian Government has no commercial or industrial attaches. John Tyler, in Charge. Si Am. Report from Minister King. American Legation, Bangkok, Siam, November 5, 1904. Replying to diplomatic circular July 29, 1904, Promotion of Trade Interests: Question No. 1. This would be practicable at this legation, and we have found it quite advisable. The right to make annotations and suggestions on the part of the diplomatic representative would be necessary, unless, as in our case at present, the most cordial co-operation is observed...
