Ts it not time to lift up the standard of the native born, and inscribe thereon in letters--of blood, if need be--Americans shall rule America, and ask all who love liberty, virtue, and honor: who love the God of our fathers, and the memory of their mothers, to rally round it and stand by it to the end Let us make this the home of an honest, manly, temperate, educated people, not an asylum for imbeciles; not a penal colony for old world criminals; not a place for the propagation of vice; not a land where immorality and irreligion shall be omnipotent, but one in which truth, justice, sobriety, cleanliness and thrift shall bear gentle and wholesome sway. The speaker at this point grew considerably calmer, his tone less violent, and his manner more agreeable. I would keep no one out; I should invite no...
